Necessity For Labour Party In Canada Stressed

Canadian Labour Problems Revealed by D. Lewis

DISCUSSION HELD

Caplan and Kirsch Elected to Executive Committee of Club

"We must have a Labour Party in Canada, just as we must have one in every capitalistic country," said David Lewis at a meeting of the Labour Club held last night at 8.00 p.m. in the Strathcona Hall. "Canada is undoubtedly one of the most backward countries in its Labour Legislation. There is no eight hour day legislation, no child labour legislation, no unemployment insurance and no old age pension legislation being enforced. And there will be no enforcement until we have a responsible Labour Party in Canadian Politics."

As an introduction to his informal talk, Lewis stated that for convenience he would divide the Labour movement into divisions; first, the Labour movement of the present, and second, the Labour movement of the future. The first was a movement for the betterment of the conditions of the labourers and the second was a movement which would teach and work towards a social and economic change. These two divisions of Labour sometimes definitely oppose each other. Opinions differed as to whether or not these divisions could be reconciled. The opinion of the American Federation of Labour of the United States was that they could not, but that of the Labour Party in England was that they could.

Lewis stated that the labourer in Canada was badly off, although his condition was better than that of the European labourer. His condition has not improved in proportion to the development of the country, and the only thing that can improve his state is the Labour Party.

One reason for the lack of activity of any Labour Body in forming the third party in Canada was due to the influence of the American Federation of Labour which is strongly anti-political. It was not until 1906 that the Canadian Trades and Labour Congress began to encourage Labour activity in politics. At this time it merely advocated Provincial Labour Parties rather than a National Labour Party, which policy Lewis believed to be harmful.

Three reasons for the slow development of the Canadian party were the division of all Labour Organizations, the Catholic Labour Union's affiliation with the Church and a lack of class-consciousness. This class-consciousness was simply a realization of injustice being done to labourers and a realization of self-interests.

The speaker believed that the possibility of the growth of a Labour Party in Canada depended on the growth of one in the United States. This would be in the near future. (Continued on page three)

Union Is Reserved For Soph Gathering

Skills Will Be Staged by Members

On the night of December 12th the Union will be reserved for the members of Arts '32. Here, from 7 o'clock an opportunity will be given not only to the mere men, but also, above all to the gracious members of the R.V.C. In that distinguished year, to enjoy themselves in the most approved style—and all for the purely nominal sum of fifty cents.

All members are urged to attend the basketball game to be held in the Montreal High School that afternoon and to then sally forth to the Union where, through the untiring efforts of the class executive, they will pass the next few hours in feasting and merrymaking. Special skills are being written by the leading literary figures of the class.

The executive is anxious to encourage the genius that they feel must be hidden somewhere among the members of so exceptional a class; accordingly all who feel the literary, or, more particularly, the musical urge come upon them, are asked to give free rein to their talent and to bring the resultant masterpiece to Bill Stetler, Alene Bouldin, Ed Cockerton, or Dave Lloyd who will receive it with open arms.

Chancellor Donates Copy Of MacDonald's Address

SPINSTERS VIE WITH BARROWS

Debate Relative Merits at Arts '31 Society

"Resolved That A Wheelbarrow Is More Useful On A Farm Than An Old Maid" will be the resolution at this afternoon's meeting of the Arts '31 Debating Society in Room 70 of the Arts Building at three o'clock this afternoon. The affirmative will be upheld by Doug McIntyre and Ken House, while the negative side will be debated by George Broderick and Bert Costello.

"Not only on the farm, but right in the meeting-room tomorrow, a barrow is going to be useful," said Doug McIntyre yesterday when interviewed by a Daily representative yesterday. "For our opponents will need to be wheeled out in such a vehicle when we are through with them."

The series has now advanced more than half way through the first round, and the Society hopes to be ready to begin the quarter-finals with the New Year.

The President, George Chalmers, will be glad to receive the fifty cent levy for the trophies from any of the debaters.

In 1840 Baths Were Licensed

Medical Advice Was Necessary to Have One

Washington State College, Pullman, Dec. 2.—Adam Thompson of Cincinnati helped to bring men forth from darkness into light—yet he remains an unsung hero of the past. To him belongs the credit of building the first bathtub in the United States.

According to Stanley A. Smith, head of the Washington State college department of architectural engineering, Thompson not only built the first bathtub, but he took the first bath in it.

"On December 20, 1842, Thompson immersed himself in his crude, lead-lined tub," Professor Smith declares. "He was so delighted with this new sensation that he immediately decided to have a party on Christmas eve and accordingly invited a number of friends. Four of the party, who were considered braver than the rest, took a bath; and the astonishing thing was that nothing happened to them."

"The news spread. People from all over the country came to see this new contrivance. Then the knackers began to knock. Newspapers said that a bath a day would ruin the democratic simplicity of the republic. Doctors predicted that all sorts of ailments would follow bathing. Had Adam Thompson introduced his bathtub a few centuries earlier the chances are he would have been burned at the stake along with some of the Salem witches."

"The city of Philadelphia lacked only two votes in their common council for the prohibition of bathing from November 1 to the middle of March. Virginia placed a tax of $20 a year on every tub brought into the state. Boston, cultured Boston, made bathing unlawful except upon medical advice. Imagine us calling on our family doctor for a prescription to take a bath! But in spite of this opposition by 1860 every first class hotel in New York city boasted of one bathtub. Now they advertise one thousand rooms with one thousand baths."

Booklets Resemble Last Year's Copies Of "Loose Thinking"

Each Student's Name Is Engraved On His Copy

Following the precedent set last year when the address of Lord Birkhead was reprinted in small booklets for the students, the Chancellor of McGill made arrangements to publish the speech of the Rt. Hon. J. Ramsay MacDonald on the "Imagination of Life".

The occasion of the address was the special convocation held in Moyse Hall last month for the purpose of conferring an honorary degree of LL. D. on England's Prime Minister.

The subject of the address was considered of such great value and inspiration to the students that copies of the text with each individual name stamped on the cover were distributed to everyone in McGill yesterday morning.

Mr. MacDonald stated that imagination is the corner-stone of all success in business or the professions and in the yet more important matter of living. As a public man, Mr. MacDonald declared that he was particularly interested in education, because educated and uneducated men and women were the raw material with which he had to work. The people the University educated, he used. To the students, however, he made an earnest plea that they should not allow the pursuit of their studies to take from them their individuality. He urged them to spend less time in the study of science and more in the reading of good novels.

"The greatest failures in politics are due almost invariably to poverty of imagination—a wide and lively imagination, an enormous faculty of sympathy—a failure to conceive many characters and to know how they will act in a given case."

This message of Mr. MacDonald's seemed most worthy of preservation in some permanent form, and by permission of the Montreal Gazette the report of the proceedings has been reprinted.

Lectures To Be Heard On Radio

Broadcast Series of Talks on Canadian Subjects

Four lectures by members of the History Department at McGill will be broadcast during the present month in connection with the exhibits in the McCord National Museum. Eugene, Oregon, Dec. 2.—(By Exchange Service)—Four students in accounting at the University of Oregon, as a result of consistently high grades, are being allowed to study the accounting field for their own information, without being responsible for grades. It was announced recently by Dr. James A. Johnston of the school of business administration faculty.

The students are Ronello B. Lewis, of Salem; Ernest A. Alme, of Astoria; and William H. Ayres and Sidney D. Hoffman of Eugene.

Dr. Johnston said that, as far as he knows, these four are the only students in the university who are studying under this system.

Radical Changes Are Proposed

Premier Outlines Platform at Open-Air Meeting

SESSION TONIGHT

Hon. Goldenberg Will Introduce Bill in House on Military Training

Arrayed on both sides of the stairs of the Arts Building this afternoon, the main speakers of both the Labour and the Leisure party received vociferous applause from the audience of about three hundred students who came to listen to the words of the "greatest men on the continent." The Rt. Hon. A. M. Klein announced his platform which he described to be the "most liberal and extensive ever to be proposed in the history of legislation."

Speaking to the swiftly gathering throng, the Prime Minister said that "the bill which my colleague, the Hon. C. Goldenberg will propose regarding the abolition of military training in the educational institutions of the country, at the session tomorrow night in the Ballroom of the Union, is one of the greatest and most significant moves ever to be made in this country, and for that matter in any part of the world, including Chicago. We will in such a manner reduce the expense of the country so that more money will be available for public works."

This part of his speech roused the audience to such heights of rapture, that the Premier had to wait a few moments before he could proceed with his panegyric.

Announces Platform He next announced his platform as follows:

1. No examinations unless the professors miss at least one-eighth of the lectures.
2. Elevation of members of the rugby team to the senate or some other asylum for the aged upon graduation.
3. Purchase of gags and chokers for library gossip.
4. Women to be allowed on the Students' Council.
5. Students' Council to be abolished.
6. Hazing of Freshmen by Professors.
7. Granting of travelling scholarships to students with at least three supplementaries.
8. Import duty on face powder for the protection of the Canadian flour industry and for farm relief.
9. Lip-stick on the free-list, in view of the fact that it forms a staple food.

In addition to his platform the Prime Minister announced that the awards for speeches made, and those

Biographies Wanted

None Submitted After Thursday Will Be Printed

The following men in Applied Science are asked to hand their annual biographies in at once:—F. S. Nation, and P. M. Blanchet. In Architecture the biography of J. K. Wolever is lacking. Because Science men have been most prompt in answering the call for biographies their section is ready first and will be sent down to the printer in the first batch of copy on Thursday or Friday.

After that time all biographies missing will have to be omitted. The men in question should get in touch with W. F. Thomas who is Science representative on the Annual Advisory Board.

If sufficient progress is made the Arts and Commerce write-ups will also be sent down before the end of

Perrault Gave French Tale Of Hop O' Thumb

H. Guy Addressed Conference of Alliance Francaise

RITZ-CARLTON

Cercle Francais Attended After Business Meeting in Union

Before a distinguished audience last night in the main Ball Room of the Ritz Carlton Hotel Monsieur Henri Guy told of the Charles Perrault's tales. The meeting was attended by ten members of the Cercle Francais who had proceeded thence after their business meeting.

The speaker of the evening addressed his audience with a pleasing style and manner without repeating himself once during the entire evening. Monsieur Guy is at present Recteur of the University of Grenoble whose extension courses are well known on this side of the Ocean.

Charles Perrault is the man who gave France the tales of Cinderella, Blue Beard, Hop O' My Thumb, the Sleeping Beauty and numerous other similar stories. He did not originate any of the plots, the speaker pointed out, but his style, manner of presentation, simplicity, and other literary qualities have made them endure to the present day. He tells us of living fiery dragons with the same reality and interest to the reader as his descriptions of Mediaeval princesses and Knights errant.

All these stories appeared at about the same period in the literatures of other languages, but it remained to Perrault to give them their final definite form in France. All his stories he showed had human note. In Bluebeard it is the old story of curiosity in human nature which goes too far. Several of his tales deal with the dream romances of young maidens of knights who come into their lives. Monsieur Guy stated humorously that such was the case today, though the knight in question did not often turn out to be what the lady originally hoped him to be.

In all the works of the author in question there is to be found an unequalled touch of spirituality and youthfulness. They are not dried up works of the 17th century to be put on the shelf, but deal with living things with relationship to happenings of today. Is not the story of Hop O' My Thumb and his seven league boots the very essence of our modern age of speed? Monsieur Guy ended by saying that though the tales of Charles Perrault had no scientific value owing to the advance of civilization, they lived on because their keynote was that of human happiness.

In the short business session the members were told of their financial position by the treasurer Gil Boright. Debaters were chosen for future meetings and volunteers were accepted for plays for the joint meeting.

Waugh's Attitude Attacked In Toronto

Pastor of Timothy Eaton Memorial Church Disagrees

Toronto, Dec. 3.—Rev. Trevor Davies of Timothy Eaton Memorial Church entirely disagreed with the statements and attitude of Professor Waugh of the Department of History at McGill University at a meeting of the Empire Club last week.

"So far as the Commonwealth of Nations is concerned, England holds up her head very high because of her sisterhood in the great commonwealth of peoples," he said, before members of the Canadian Club yesterday. "However, you will live there a long time before you hear the English deliver an oration about the Empire."

"I read that Professor Waugh was apprehensive concerning the future of the Empire; that in England the Empire is regarded at best with friendly indifference and at worst with impatient indifference," he said.

"I believe that Professor Waugh has misunderstood the English people. They do not talk about these things."

The Reverend Trevor H. Davies is pastor of Timothy Eaton Memorial Church.

Stu Hungerford Plays at Jazz Tea Tomorrow

Tomorrow will be a gala day for the Union tea sippers. Yea and verily! For at five o'clock sharp Stu Hungerford and his band of college syncopators will disport themselves about the old reliable piano in the Cafeteria while the milling thousands wrap themselves around the edibles. Those who have been fortunate enough to attend either or both of the Union Informals will be able to vouch for the class of Stu's offerings. Anyone who doubts the mossy gag which claims that music hath charms to soothe the savage breast, should certainly make a point of being present. A free can of sawdust will be given away with each and every ten-cent purchase.

British Premier Sends Message

Accepts Dedication of "Old McGill 1929"

PROGRESS MADE

Contract for Printing and Engraving to be Signed This Week

The Right Honourable Ramsay MacDonald Prime Minister of Great Britain and Northern Ireland, has accepted the dedication of the Annual. In reply to a letter from the Board the Premier returned a message of about forty words in his own handwriting, accompanied by his most recent photo-portfolio. It is the wish of the Annual Board that the Premier's message remain unpublished until the completed Book appears on the Campus.

Next in importance to the announcement of the receipt of the Premier's message was a letter from the Students' Council ratifying the selection of Photo Engravers and Electrotypers as the printers of this year's Annual. The contract will be signed later in the week and copy will at once be sent down for proofs. "Old McGill 1929" is now fairly in progress. If no unforeseen difficulties arise, there is no reason why the Book should not be in the hands of the purchasers before the middle of April. Already much copy has been received and prepared for the printer. In the faculty of Applied Science there are only two biography forms missing, while the Faculty of Architecture lacks only the writing-up of one member.

The various class representatives reported the most encouraging sort of progress. Every Science biography is in the copy bag, except three and these are expected daily. Commerce has turned in its full quota as has the R.V.C. and Theology. However, these have yet to be checked against the class lists.

Medicine's special extension of time is rapidly drawing to a close and their biographies are expected to reach the Annual office before the end of the week.

Notman's reports a steady stream of seniors demanding that they be photographed, and here also the utmost expedition is expected from all faculties.

Eighteenth Century Play to be Presented

The English Department play for the second term is now under way. The presentation will be an early eighteenth century play. Students who wish to take part in the production are asked to meet Miss Leona Gray in Moyse Hall on Thursday and Friday afternoons from two to five.

Osler Society Pays Visit To Osler Library

Hubbard Gives Paper on "Military Surgery"

MEDICAL BUILDING

Second Meeting of Year Features Special Exhibition of Rare Books

The collection of books contained in the Osler Library is of interest to students of all faculties. Dr. Francis, Librarian has stated. It is not merely a collection of technical medical volumes, and an invitation is extended to all students to pay a visit to the library, even if only a short one, and to become acquainted with the treasures that it contains.

An official introduction to the Osler Library was given to the Osler Society last night, when the Society abandoned its usual place of meeting in the Ritz Carlton, and repaired to the Medical Building to hear a paper dealing with "Military Surgery" given by Edward Hubbard. Following the paper itself, Dr. Scrimger, co-members on a tour through the Library, and an examination of some of the treasures that it contains.

Dr. Scrimger and Dr. Bazin, both members of the department of surgery, and both acquainted at first hand with war-time surgery as seen in the great war, were present to introduce the discussion that followed the paper itself. Dr. Scrimger congratulated the speaker on the thorough way in which he had prepared his subject, and remarked on the particular advances that surgery had seen during the great war, particularly as regards abdominal surgery. Dr. Bazin followed the same line of thought, stressing the different conditions that the war had brought out as regards surgical conditions, and the unprepared state in which medical men found themselves to meet them.

A remark as to the pictorialization of war by the now famous book, "All Quiet on the Western Front," brought forward the freely expressed opinion of both Dr. Scrimger and Dr. Bazin that the book was a repulsive and exaggerated picture of the war, even from soldiers' viewpoint. Dr. Scrimger stated that in his opinion the book was untrue from the psychological viewpoint of the soldier of the British Army, and he did not think that humanity valued so much that the same could not be said for the soldiers of other armies.

The paper of the evening by Edward Hubbard discussed military surgery from the standpoint of the relation of the military surgeon to other members of the profession, and their relation to the population at large and the effect of their experience.

Aerial Pictures Of Montreal Are Show

Captain Finnie Speaks on Aerial Photography

Map-making and aerial photography were the subjects discussed by Captain Finnie. The first pictures consisted of aerial views of Montreal among which were the Royal Bank, the South Shore Bridge, the harbour, and also unedited views of McGill, Vickers Dock, and vertical photos of Windsor Street Station, Place Viger Station, and the Sun Life Building.

War views of French towns and cities depicted the military value of pictures taken from the air. These were views of Paris, Bourdeaux, Versailles.

Mosaic views for map-making and aerial photo reading completed the survey of government use. Actual photos were then passed around for inspection.

Map-reading will be the subject treated Thursday at 6 o'clock in Room 38 of the Engineering Building.

MONTREAL, WEDNESDAY, DECEMBER 4, 1929.

LEADERSHIP

THE system of nomination from among the voters, and then an election at large was proved faulty in the lack of interest it inspires last Monday, but this fault is anything but its only drawback. How does a candidate secure nomination? Seldom because he has proved himself one of those fittest for the post concerned. Quite often a small group of only two or three are the only ones who think of a nominee; the other signatures are an easy matter. And strange as it may seem, this nominating of unthought of men brings often out the best and most popular candidates.

Quite often the men whom all feel at the moment to be the logical choice is left out, because though admired by all, he may have no supporter to take the initiative of starting a nomination slip. Then again there is the group which takes it turn about to run for office, with the rest of the group to support the one whose turn it is to run, and then the man who feels it his duty to be the proposer of a nomination at each and every election which occurs on the campus. When we think that these are the bodies who choose the group of men from whom we in our turn make our choice, we look around for a better system.

The only alternative which appears is that of a nominating panel; but when we stop to ask what merits the panel are to consider in making their choice, we see the reason for the faultiness of both open and closed nomination systems, and even the faultiness of student elections themselves. The criterion is the quality called "leadership." Such a fiction is that quality that it is no wonder choices are poor.

A good synonym for leadership is "nerve," or even better that particular type of nerve which is vulgarly called "gall." The man whom the world styles a natural leader is that insufferable type who always wants to run the whole show; the man who when others hang back in modesty, imagines they are hanging back because they feel him more qualified; and so steps forward with his "Leave it to me." But when he has thrust himself forward several times his companions become used to his running things, attaching to him for his rise above them that quality, of leadership; a quality obtained in the first place by his not having had the decency to give others a chance.

This whole attack seems to lead nowhere; it began with an attack on the prevalent system of nomination, and it goes back now to defend it, even in virtue of what are considered its faults. For by the usual engineering processes which go on, generally by some lucky chance a nominee turns up who possesses those qualities, if there are really any, which stamp him as a representative of his fellows.

Even if only for an appearance of giving free choice, open nomination is better than that by a panel. The Scarlet Key has neither appearances, nor the object of opening their society behind their proposed change in their B group nomination system, but only the simplification of elections by a decrease of election dates; yet they will be considered a more open society than before, and probably will be such. Even open nomination for no good reason at all is a better system than group nomination based on that mistaken criterion, leadership.

IMAGINATION IN LIFE

THROUGH the courtesy of the Chancellor, Mr. E. W. Beatty, every undergraduate has received a booklet called Imagination in Life, which is a reprint of the report of the proceedings at the Special Convocation, of October 21st this year, when the Rt. Hon. J. Ramsay MacDonald, Prime Minister of Great Britain received the honorary degree of Doctor of Laws.

We would advise everyone to read it, and then compare it with the previous gift from the Chancellor, Loose Thinking, by Lord Birkenhead.

The two appear to be antagonistic in ideals and it is well for us that we have two sides of a case presented to us. Both are by British statesmen, who are contemporaries. The one has given up political life for what he terms the glittering prizes of commerce, which knock Christianity for a row of skittles; the other, the older, has not lost hope and continues in the fight.

If one is to encourage the use of imagination in life, then loose thinking must become a part of ones being. By loose thinking we do not mean slipshod methods but the assimilation of a good groundwork and from that letting ones thoughts fly off into aerial worlds that are the outcome of hypotheses built upon reason. By imagination we mean cutting oneself off from the humdrum of the steady grind and drawing aside for a while to make concrete in the mind the wisps of fancy and ideal that have forced their way into our thinking at times when we have shooed them away as not being part of our practical being.

Fishing for the moon in the lake or trying to extract sunbeams from cucumbers may be the wildest flights for some of us. But others dream of plugging in on the town supply to receive our daily meal of energy, of dialing in to see and hear Byrd flying to the South Pole, of being able to eradicate disease in a body before birth, of giving the average man a better chance to enjoy life at its fullest.

These are the dreams that come to us and no one can belittle them by calling them loose thinking. Many, we hope, will be prompted to dream a little more by the reading of the gift book of the Chancellor. Our only lament is that a verbatim report of Ramsay MacDonald's speech was not taken at the time.

Correspondence

The Editor,
McGill Daily,
Dear Sir:
I wish through your columns to express my thanks to those who supported me in the recent elections. I shall endeavour to be worthy of their trust.
Yours truly,
C. W. Morrison.

The Editor,
McGill Daily,
Dear Sir:
Through the privilege of your column, may I extend to my worthy opponent — congratulations, to my supporters — thanks.
Yours truly,
Allan Edson.

The Editor,
McGill Daily,
Dear Sir:
May I, through your column express my thanks to those who supported me in the elections last Monday.
Thanking you,
Yours truly,
H. Keller, Jr.

The Editor,
McGill Daily,
Dear Sir:
In yesterday's Daily, the report of elections to the Students' Council and Scarlet Key included a detailed statement of the number of votes received by each candidate. Such a procedure is customary in the Daily.

May I voice widespread sentiment in condemning strongly this practice, which can result in no good and can only serve to humiliate those unsuccessful candidates whose backers are few.
Yours sincerely,
F. D. Mott.

The Editor,
McGill Daily,
Dear Sir:
It is with great reluctance that I force myself to take up my pen again in defence of my position regarding the Chinese Republic. I thought that I had made myself quite plain on the subject but apparently Mr. S. S. Kwauk at least failed completely to grasp my meaning. I would not have troubled to take more of your valuable space, Sir, had I not seen from Mr. Kwauk's recent lengthy epistle that he has calmed down a little and is at last ready to listen to reason and real facts. The opportunity is too good to miss and it is with the sincere desire of clearing up this vexatious matter once and for all that I have written this letter.

As an excuse for writing his second letter, Mr. Kwauk said, "I am forced to defend a country to which I am related." Mr. Kwauk's bravery is entirely uncalled for because, as he should have seen from the original report, I did not, nor have now, any desire to attack his country in any way. Because the true facts contained in my paper did not wholly fit into the rosy picture of China as visualised by Mr. Kwauk, he erroneously considered them as an attack against his country and a personal affront to himself. I was not previously aware of Mr. Kwauk's existence at McGill but even if I had been this fact would not in the least have effected any change in my paper. As a student of history and current events, it is my duty to reveal the facts in their true light and not as some individual would like them to be.

Mr. Kwauk again accuses me of "unjustly numbering the waning days of the Republic of which he is an insignificant part". While admiring his modesty, I find myself called upon to point out to him for the second time that the dire prophecy as to China's becoming a colony of some foreign Power cannot be attributed to me but is a quotation of Mr. H. K. Norton, as I plainly showed in my paper. For the benefit of Mr. Kwauk who, sadly to say, has not yet regained his sight, I will repeat my words as they appeared in my paper and my first letter. I said that "the impact of the Occident, the importation of Western ideas and methods, and their reaction upon the ancient Chinese forms will shape a new China. The progress of industrialism, the social changes now taking place, and the assimilation of new ideas are contributing to the re-shaping of China." Without further explanation, I allow these words to represent my stand on the question, regardless of any adverse meaning that Mr. Kwauk may take out of them.

After unblushingly admitting that he has never heard of Mr. H. K. Norton's name, Mr. Kwauk says, "Mr. Norton was talking about conditions years ago and now Mr. McIntyre quotes him to describe the present day China, a fallacy only too clear to be ignored." As a man who has never even heard of Mr. Norton, Mr. Kwauk seems very conversant with his views as expressed in his book quoted by me. Far from being an absolute authority on Chinese conditions his book was published only last year and it is based upon an intimate study of present day China such as I am confident Mr. Kwauk has not experienced. Although I had read Mr. Norton's book I merely offered his statements without further comment (Continued on page four)

"Hear Ye! Hear Ye!!"

NEWS used to be exceedingly scarce. The town crier would stand in the public square noisily clanging his bell to attract attention. When the crowd of eager citizens had assembled he would read the latest proclamation or give a brief summary of the news.

Today in your easy chair you glance over the newspaper and in a few minutes completely inform yourself on the news of the day. Not only do you know what is transpiring in the world of events, but you are up on the news of the busy market places where the best of everything can be bought.

The advertisements are by no means the least important news in the paper. They are an accurate index of what other people are buying, selling, wearing, eating, doing, learning; of what the world is accomplishing and how, where and by whom it is being accomplished.

They give you the opportunity for comparison and selection of almost everything you want or need. They bring the wares of the world to your door.

Form the habit of reading the advertisements as regularly as you read the front page.

Boxers, Wrestlers, Oarsmen Flock to Field House For Training Grind

Many New Men Join Squad at Fieldhouse

BOUTS SATURDAY

Still Many Openings in the Heavier Weights—Boyce Back

Every Tuesday and Thursday the Field House is a scene of great activity, for these boxing nights. Coach Bert Light has a very enthusiastic squad in spite of his stiff work outs. Last night three shadowy figures were seen running around, the snow covered track in preparation for indoor exercises. It is this sort of spirit that is going to put McGill's pugilists on top in the inter-collegiate meet.

A great deal of new material is to be found at these work outs. There is Arthur Minnion of Arts, Roche Robertson pre-med and Harry Boyce McGill's light heavy weight champion of 1927-28.

Art Minnion fighting 147 lbs. was champion of his weight in Lower Canada College as well as taking the laurels in their inter-school meets. He shows a wonderful form and fights a skillful aggressive bout. The coach is confident that he will shape into one of the strongest cogs in the McGill team.

Roche Robertson a husky man from the far west shows promise in the middle-weight division. He gained his experience at Brentwood College in Victoria B.C. which speaks well for the western school training. From the work outs he has the appearance of our title defenders in this weight.

The light heavy weights were glad to see Harry Boyce back in training. Those of us who can remember his hard punching attacks will appreciate his return to the fighting game. This class has few contestants but we can rest assured that Boyce will make up for this deficit.

For the inter-collegiate meet the following weights must be covered, 112, 118, 126, 135, 147, 160, 175 and over 175 lbs. Most of these weights are filled with good men some of whom are out for the first time under McGill's colours. The coach feels confident that these men will make a favorable showing in their outside fights.

Some time this week the second round of the eliminations will be held and from these new material is sure to crop up.

Lande Speaks

The Rt. Honourable Harold Lande rose to reply to the harangue of the Right Hon. Mr. Klein, amid a rain of snowballs.

When the words came flowing from his mouth, however, the entire audience was hushed into silence, and listened attentively to the speech, except for a few hecklers, who continued to discomfort the leader of the opposition.

What he had to say, he thought, he could say to better advantage at the session tomorrow night, when he hopes to rout the government on their measure of military training.

He continued to contrast the wealth and the prosperity of the country under the different regimes of the parties.

"If you want to wear taccoon coats like I do," he said, sweeping his hand in the direction of his ministers, "you should support us."

With this he puffed out his chest, and retired amid the loud applause of his supporters.

The Rt. Hon. D. Lewis, and the Hon. E. G. Collard, members of the government and the opposition respectively, then entreated all the members to turn out in full force to aid their respective parties.

RECEIVES CREDIT FOR LATERAL PASS

Followers of American football received quite a surprise when Harvard beat Yale 10-6 in Cambridge ten days ago, after the Eli had entered the game as 8-5 favorites in the betting. Critics who saw the game attribute this form reversal to the lateral passing of the winners, who have indeed, used this form of attack most successfully during the last two years.

One prominent metropolitan sports writer goes on to say that the credit for this must be laid at the door of Frank Shaughnessy, who was responsible for introducing the lateral pass—or end run as it is called in Canada—at Harvard.

His article not only sounds another note of praise for the fine rugby brain of "Shag"; it also establishes a definite connection between the two codes and shows clearly that American football has been definitely enriched by the acquisition of this distinctly Canadian feature.

MEDS ARE VICTIMS

One-Sided Scores Registered in Interclass Basketball Games Last Night

Last night's games in the Interclass basketball League saw no startling changes in the standing. Arts Freshman continued to set the pace with a clean cut win over the Second Year Meds, while the Arts Sophs swamped Med 3, thus somewhat atoning for the result of the Inter-faculty football final last month.

Arts II triumphed over the Med III quintet to the tune of 31 to 4. The half-time score of this fast and hard-checking game was 13 to 1. The referee was J. Levin. The winners generously offered to send upon request their autographed photographs to their many female admirers in R.V.C.

The teams were as follows:

TURNOUTS GOOD

Norwood and Golfer to Make Strong Bid for Inter-collegiate Honours

Since moving to their new home in the stadium the wrestlers have shown signs of renewed activity and the situation looks much brighter than in the past. Previous to this season the squad has been hampered by poor quarters and small turnouts, but with its headquarters moved to the field house the club is proving an attraction to some very promising material, and Coach Smith is confident that the wrestlers will do more than their share towards making a success of the coming Intercollegiate assault. Two of McGill's leading lights are Norwood and Golfer. The former is an extremely scientific grappler in the 145 lb class who learnt the art while attending M.I.T. While at that college Norwood captured the Intercollegiate championship of the United States, competing against men from Harvard, Dartmouth, Brown, and other well known universities. He is considered an outstanding prospect for the Collegio and Intercollegiate titles. Golfer is a product of McGill who competes in the 139 lb class. In 1927 he reached the College finals but lost to Derrick, former Intercollegiate champion. Last year he captured the College title and now is considered one of the Red Team's best bets for Intercollegiate honours.

It is fairly definite that there will be a trip to Ottawa about the middle of February for the purpose of competing against the Capital city Y.M.C.A. There is considerable competition for places on the team, and enthusiasm was at a high pitch on Monday when further advanced instruction was given by the coach.

A wrestling club has been formed at MacDonald College under the tutelage of Wolfe, former 112 lb Metropolitan Champion of New York City. It has been announced that Coach Smith will go to MacDonald on Friday to review the situation.

The second influence was that of the Labour Party in England. If that Party held office for a sufficiently long time and were sufficiently successful, Canada might follow their good example.

In conclusion Lewis stressed the important part being played by the University Students in the establishment of a Labour Party by educating the Labour Class to its condition.

At the opening of the meeting, Carl Bergithon, who presided read the constitution of the Club. It was decided to increase the membership. Those wishing to become members should apply to any member of the executive. The executive committee is as follows: Carl Bergithon, David Lewis, Helga Tait, Ben Caplan and Ed Kirsch.

Seconds Prepare To Open Season

Hockeyists Swing Into Action After New Year

With the opening game of the current season only a month away, the Intermediate squad of Red puck-chasers will soon get down to serious practice. This year the Intermediate loop is composed of Bishops, Loyola, U. of M., and McGill. Little is known of the other teams but it is expected that they will be quite as strong as in other years. Fencing Notes

An international fencing tournament between Canada and the United States has been scheduled to take place in the near future. The team from the States will be chosen from the members of the American Amateur Fencers League while Canada will be represented by a team selected from the roll of the Quebec Fencers League. McGill will be represented on the Canadian squad as McKergow, Captain of the Red team, and Wickers, runner-up in the recent open tournament sponsored by the North Branch Y. will compete in the foil. All three weapons will be fenced, i.e. Foils, Sabre, and Duelling Sword. The match is scheduled for December 13th and 14th at the M.A.A. Concentrated practices are being held daily both at the M.A.A. and the McGill headquarters in the Montreal High School Gym. The outcome of this contest will be of great interest from the standpoint of the relative strength of Canada and the United States in the art of sword-play.

ience and knowledge acquired in war upon the advance of science.

In a comprehensive survey the speaker discussed the surgical development up to the time of the Renaissance, including the prehistoric Babylonian, Chinese, Egyptian early and late Greek and Mayan contributions.

The speaker made specific mention of Ambrose Pare who first introduced the ligature into the practise of surgery. During the 15th century, Richard Wiseman was a prominent figure in English surgery, and won renown through his original methods and ideas in the treatment of the wounds.

John Hunter in the next century spent a few years of his early life as an army surgeon, and published a "Treatise on the Blood," "Inflammation, and Gunshot Wounds."

After outlining the rapid strides made in surgery since Paster and Lister and its remarkable development during the Great War, Hubbard concluded his paper by emphasising the honourable position held by military surgeons in history.

Discussion followed the paper in which Dr. Scrimger remarked that one of the features of surgical practice in the war was the recognition that soiled wounds could be made clean and infected wounds could not, with the result that hospital bases equipped for operative procedures were established close to the front so as to permit early treatment.

Dr. Bazin added to the discussion remarking that war has always been the surgeons opportunity to study wounds, trauma, and the process of healing.

Surgeons were quite unprepared for the conditions that confronted them in the late war, hence a tremendous amount of original work had to be done in devising suitable ways of treating jagged wounds due to artillery gunfire. The fact that the soil of France and Belgium was so infected from centuries of fertilisation of animal matter which when blown into wounds complicated and impeded the task of surgeons by the infective processes that so often ensued.

It was not until the closing years of the war that the French devised a method of mechanical cleansing wounds of soiled and necrosed tissue.

The Osler Library, consisting of some 7600 bound volumes dealing with the history of Medicine and Science formed the subject of a few remarks by Dr. Francis, librarian, before conducting the society to a special prepared exhibit in the Library of the Prima Sectional division of the books of the collection, consisting of the bibliography and papers of sixty-seven men whom Osler regarded as having made the outstanding contributions to science and medicine.

Dr. Francis emphasised that a great deal of interesting material to students of all faculties was contained in the Library, and that all few students were welcome, and would find even a short visit profitable and stimulating.

Formation Of McGill Glider Club Urged

Membership Of Thirty Men Required

With financial assistance to the extent of $100.00 promised by Capt. Lighthall, and the possibility of some such aid from the McGill Light Aeroplane Club, the formation of a McGill Gliders Club has been advocated by the committee appointed to consider the matter, provided that thirty members will join at three dollars a head. If so, the committee suggests that officers be chosen at the meeting to be held at 5:30 p.m. Wednesday December 4th, in the Macdonald Physics Theatre.

The full text of the committee's report follows.

1) Further inquiry is desirable as to a suitable locality near Montreal for hill gliding.

2) Ground work and gliding on the level might well begin without delay at Cartierville.

3) It seems possible to form a club so that members would construct their own gliders, and opportunity to do this has been generously offered by the Curtiss-Reid Aircraft Co.

4) As regards finance, it is considered that sufficient funds would be available for the year if thirty members joined paying three dollars each.

5) Capt. Lighthall has generously offered a subscription of $100 towards a second glider if the students provide funds and manufacture a first.

6) Mr. C. W. Morrison has also stated that the McGill Light Aeroplane Club might make a contribution towards the Gliders Club.

as the views of an experienced student of Chinese affairs, as Mr. Norton is, notwithstanding anything Mr. Kwauk may say to the contrary. To have Mr. Norton's statements ascribed to me by Mr. Kwauk is an honour which I decline.

Mr. Kwauk goes on to say that "Mr. McIntyre's study unsupplement-ed by observed facts probably has turned him into a bigot." If Mr. Kwauk had not carefully scorned to observe my quotations from recent Telegraph News despatches which even he cannot refute, he would have seen the unsuitability of the terms "unsupplemented" and "bigot". By refusing to take account of the civil strife, unpleasant though it may be, at present being waged between the Nationalist and the Kuomintang parties even in the face of foreign aggression, Mr. Kwauk is admirably fitting himself for the name of "bigot".

Far from suffering under the discouragement of Mr. Kwauk, I am hoping that he at last understands my position as regards this tiresome controversy. With this expectation in view, I heartily endorse Mr. Kwauk's desire to have the whole question closed. I agree with him that "this step will do us both good, and that it is far removed from the minds of both of us to attain notoriety on the campus."

Yours truly,

G. D. McIntyre.
